TUESDAY, OCTOBER 20, 1896.

REPUBLICAN NOMINATIONS.

For President.

WILLIAM MCKINLEY, of Ohio.

For Vice President.

GARRET A. HOBART, of New Jersey.

FOR PRESIDENTIAL ELECTORS.

JOHN F. HILL, of Augusta.

First District—EDWIN F. HILL.

Second District—A. B. NICHOLSON.

Third District—J. H. SAWYER.

Fourth District—ALBERT H. SAWYER.

The Tariff Issue.

The Boston Herald while it has done good work in the canvass for the Republican candidate, has, on different occasions, placed into Major McKinley for giving prominence to the tariff question. The Herald is so thoroughly devoted to the mistaken free trade theories that the mere mention of a protective tariff excites its ire. It happens, however, that the Herald has a special staff correspondent out in Canton who sends it a glowing account of the gratifying condition of the campaign, and in the course of his despatches says:

"The editor of the Herald will not overlook this statement of one of its own men. The tariff is a great factor in this campaign. It is making voters by the thousands for the Republican ticket and Major McKinley knew exactly what he was about when he gave it prominence in his speeches. The editor of the Herald has permitted his prejudice to warp his judgment. Personally he may believe in free trade, but he is in the minority and may as well admit the fact one time as another."

Expert Opinion.

Mr. James Freeman, the New York World correspondent, who has made a study of this campaign from nearly every State, has just completed a tour of Indiana, Iowa, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, Delaware, Maryland, West Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee, Virginia and Florida. In all of these States he has given careful attention to public sentiment, and the conclusion he reaches is that Bryan is beaten, and the situation cannot be changed between now and election day. And the glorious work is going on with unabated vigor and will continue until the verdict is rendered.

Archbishop Ireland.

Major Brady, the well-known newspaper correspondent, referring to the recent letter written by Archbishop Ireland, says: "It is not too much to say that the letter of Archbishop Ireland in denunciation of Bryanism as revolution and revolution has carried more directly into the camp of the Populists than anything that has happened since the Maine and Vermont elections. No prelate in the United States, except Cardinal Gibbons, has a larger personal following or more influence than the venerable Archbishop of St. Paul. It is not simply that his character is admired and his authority respected, but that his friendly admonitions will go farther with the laity and the masses of the Northwest than the law and gospel when interpreted by any other man of his cloth or rank. Of whom else can it be said that by a mere expression of his wish he has closed up every saloon and grogshop owned or conducted by Roman Catholics in a large city and in nearly every large town in a populous State? If any doubt remained as to the disposition of the electoral votes of Minnesota it would be dispelled by this declaration of Ireland's, and the same may be said of the electoral votes of North and South Dakota."

An effort is made by the Populists to break the force of this declaration by reminding the public that Archbishop Ireland has been a life-long Republican, and that this is not the first time that his voice has been raised for law and order and in defense of the nation's honor. This is very true. His defense of the nation's honor began away back in the early '60s. Witness a story which you will agree is timely and worth telling.

"The 4th of October, 1862," says my informant, "will never be forgotten by the Fifth Minnesota Volunteers, for on that day one of the most desperate and bloody battles of the far West was fought between the Union forces under the gallant Rosecrans and the Confederate army under Price and Van Dorn, at Corinth. On the right of the Union line and captured some of our batteries and were pouring into the streets. The Union forces were giving and receiving fire. The cry for ammunition was yelled along the line, but the supply was exhausted; when, in the distance, appeared a man carrying a barrel of cartridges on his shoulder, yelling at the top of his voice: 'Here, boys, here are the cartridges.' He carried a barrel, and carrying the barrels of cartridges, he walked after the line with death and destruction. It is doubtful whether a leader could tell all around him and deliver such a deed of bravery in record in any other day. Who was the wonderful nonpareil? None other than Father Ireland, now Archbishop Ireland of Minnesota."

Another blow at Bryanism.

The managers of the Populistic campaign in Indiana received a severe check when Mr. E. P. Shriver, Secretary of the Democratic National Committee, in the last Presidential canvass, issued a letter in which he repudiated Bryanism. Not satisfied with merely announcing his repudiation of the Chicago platform, he issued a series of denunciations in regard to the declaration of principles. The managers of the Populistic campaign in Indiana received a severe check when Mr. E. P. Shriver, Secretary of the Democratic National Committee, in the last Presidential canvass, issued a letter in which he repudiated Bryanism. Not satisfied with merely announcing his repudiation of the Chicago platform, he issued a series of denunciations in regard to the declaration of principles.

With regard to Mr. Bryan, the letter says that, "posing as the special champion of labor, he has lusted the dignity and manhood of 1,600,000 wage-earners." Mr. Bryan's advice to labor to wear McKinley buttons, but to vote for free silver is thus alluded to: "Mr. Bryan would shield the brow of American labor from an insidious crown of thorns, but advises him to put on and wear before the world a real crown of shame."

"I do not believe in Mr. Bryan's financial theories. I am constrained to believe in the arguments he advocates in support of them. I believe that the election of Mr. Bryan upon the platform on which he stands and the utterances he has made would bring on a panic. Mr. Bryan has said so himself, and is corroborated by no less an authority than Senator Teller. I do not want a panic; we have had panic enough. I know the times have been still and hard, and that men willing and able to work are walking the streets to-day in our towns and cities in enforced idleness. I know that the farmer has suffered from low prices for his products, but the condition of neither workman nor farmer would be improved by free coinage and Mr. Bryan's and Mr. Teller's rapidly succeeding panic. When one has been reduced in strength and spirits by the typhoid fever he would be a silly man indeed who, in his weak condition, would voluntarily expose himself to a smallpox by way of experimental cure."

"The experience of the entire world in all its financial history is against the probable success of free coinage of silver by this country alone at the ratio of 16 to 1, either immediately or remotely. There may be those among us who do not know exactly what we want in the way of financial reform, but with Mexico and China and the small free silver countries staring us in the face, it ought not to take us long to determine what we do not want. I regard the present crisis as the most serious that has confronted this country since 1861. It is no time to try experiments, for the future of the homes and families of our land hangs in the balance. I have illimitable faith in the intelligence, honesty and courage of the people."

The Price of Oratory.

Candidate Bryan complains that the dollar of to-day buys too much, but the low prices to which he devotes a considerable portion of his speeches do not include the price of oratory. That comes high, ten dollars a minute being the price fixed by Bryan for his regular tour. The Chicago Times-Herald says: "The amount assessed against a town where Mr. Bryan speaks fifteen minutes is $150. This is a high price to pay for a declamation that has already been delivered by the Boy Orator 332 times with but slight variation. The crusade against the workmen's 'cheap dollar' comes high. It costs money to have a great high priest of repudiation tell the people that they are getting too many potatoes, too many eggs and too much butter for a dollar. When a dollar only buys six seconds of the kind of oratory which Mr. Bryan is dropping all over the country from the rear platform of a Wagner palace car, surely there can be no just ground for complaining that the dollar we have is a 'cheap dollar.' A dollar that will only buy six seconds of Mr. Bryan is cheap enough to satisfy the most rampant cheap money advocate. But Mr. Bryan will be cheaper after Nov. 3. A whole car load of free silver oratory can be bought for a dollar after that date. No commodity in this country will be so cheap as the arguments of the repudiators, and the people will not have them at bargain-counter prices."

Harper's Weekly

IN 1896.

HARPER'S WEEKLY is a journal for the whole country. It deals with the events of the world that are important to Americans. In carrying out this policy, in 1896, Julian Ralph visited China and Japan, and journeyed through the West; Richard Harding Davis took a trip through the Caribbean Sea; the evolution of the new navy was described and illustrated by Rufus F. Zogbaum; Frederick Remington portrayed an army and frontier life; Frank Heywood attended the opening of the Kiel Canal. To give the attention will be given to every notable happening. The chief events in art, literature and music and the drama will be carefully presented. W. D. Howells, in the new department, Life and Letters, will discuss all interesting way books and the social questions of the day. The Weekly is a weekly journal of the day. It will be followed, and Charles V. Whittier will conduct the department of Amateur Sports. In 1896 will occur a Presidential election, and the Weekly will continue to be an independent, non-partisan advocate of good government and sound money.

In fiction the WEEKLY will be especially strong. It will publish the only novel of the year by W. D. Howells, and a stirring serial of a South Sea tale, by R. K. Crockett. The most stories selected are of unusual excellence and interest. In every respect HARPER'S WEEKLY will maintain its leading position as the illustrated journal of the world.

The Volume of the WEEKLY begins with the first Number for January of each year. When no time is mentioned, the subscription will begin with the Number current at the time of receipt. Remittances should be made by Post-Office Order or Draft, to avoid chance of loss. Newspapers are not to pay this advertisement with the express order of Harper & Brothers.
